ND YOU RE...?

Doug Smith
Window painter, Smith-Grasdal

ar is the strangest job anyone's ever d you to do?
lay! We do some pretty far out stuff View City Likwid Lounge—punk-rock s Claus, Santa getting a lap dance on hand and a beer in the other. This done on the mirrors inside, so 18 over. We don't want to shock any ng minds.

gest?
biggest jobs are probably the Shaw ference Centre and Telus Plaza. Those about four days to do.

favourite is probably when we do ches—we did the Trailer Park boys The Bear's Halloween Howler, that him. We also did Big Sugar for their farewell concert. We like to take it to the next level.

What makes your work stand out from others?
A lot of people just use tracers, pre-made patterns. We do everything custom, we have more shadows and highlights, there's more depth. It's really the time and effort and hopefully people notice the difference.

Do things get competitive with other painters?
Yeah, it's called crashing. There are only about five of us in town, and we all steal from each other it seems.

Unlike most painters, there comes a time where people actually wash away your art. Does this bother you?
I actually do the clean up. I think of it as performance art, something that's not permanent. I do take pictures for the sales part. It's like a flower, something beautiful for a time. What's the old saying? "The only thing permanent is change?" Ironically, sometimes the painting outlasts the business, and you can still see the painting later in the year.

Why do you keep doing it?
It's a cool medium to work on, it's something on which you can push yourself, try new techniques. You get paid to be an artist, which can't be taken for granted in this day and age. It makes a window look like something different on a plain gray day.

TOO RIGHT

THE SOFT PROFILE OF THE PALACE Casino employee ("And You Are..." Issue #680, Dec 14) who happily crosses a picket line to go to work, helping to prolong a lengthy labour dispute, does more to sabotage your progressive credentials than being owned by Conrad Black ever did. Are you guys trying to get jobs with the Western Standard?

Christopher Spencer

WE, THE EDMONTON INDUSTRIAL Workers of the World, find the latest "And You Are..." concerning as Palace Casino Workers are currently striking. For a newspaper that attempts to present itself as a progressive voice, it is not only hypocritical to profile an individual who is crossing a picket line, but a slap in the face to the many striking Palace Casino workers.

They are on strike for simple things like a safe and clean workplace, a living wage and not being forced to work overtime unpaid. The many problems at Palace Casino are explained at www.itsnopalace.com. We were surprised and disappointed that SEE Magazine chose to cross a picket line for the purpose of an article that shed a positive light on a business that has consistently undermined its workers' rights. Crossing a picket line and positively portraying a scab harms the integrity and respectability of SEE Magazine. Since when has it been acceptable to cross picket lines and turn your back on fellow workers?

TOUCHÉ

I'D LIKE TO SUGGEST THAT WHEN MIKE Hebert writes "our knowledge [of the Maya] isn't complete by any means" ("Journey Into Mel," Issue #680, Dec 14) it's probably because he didn't look into it at all. The Maya are still around, live where they have always lived, and have detailed accounts of their history.

HEALTHY CHOICE

THE APPOINTMENT OF DAVE Hancock as Minister of Health and Wellness signals Premier Stelmach is serious about promoting wellness as a key part of his government's health care strategy.

Throughout Hancock's unsuccessful campaign to be Premier, he stressed the need for Alberta to focus on health promotion and wellness rather than just acute care. Hancock talked about prevention of disease, being a healthy society and living in a healthy environment.

On his leadership campaign website Hancock said, "We need to discuss solutions to accessibility, quality, and sustainability before we start debating issues regarding private and public health care practitioners."

In this context, Friends of Medicare is keenly interested in how the new Health Minister will implement Premier Stelmach's commitment to a health workforce strategy, making the health system more productive, and expanding long-term care and improving its standards of care.

During Premier Klein's tenure there were massive layoffs of health care professionals, the blowing up and closing of hospitals and the continuous pursuit of privatization initiatives based on ideology rather than a focus on evidence-based quality of health outcomes.

Klein made it clear that he preferred market-based solutions to public solutions, despite that fact that a majority of Albertans supp public health care because it wi for them.

Albertans are looking forwa getting off the health care roller coaster ride that was the hallma the Klein government.

Sincerely yours,

Harvey W

JEFFREY GREENIAUS

ATURDAY, DEC 16 Santa (Greg Farrants), of the Edmonton Coalition Against War and Racism, ponders passerby votes on whether Stephen Harper's government has been naughty or nice.

UN WITH NUMBERS, Y'ALL

ERTA: 50 PER CENT MALE, 50 PER CENT FEMALE, ght cent visible minority, and 80 per cent urban, mostly con-trated in two metro areas of over a million folks each. d Stelmach's cabinet: two women, 16 men. All white, and t four from the sticks. We're tempted to re-moniker ady Eddie" "Grossly Out of Touch Eddie," but it doesn't me.

f course, maybe Stelmach's choices—regardless of being ographically suspect—reflect the best picks for the job, y that half of them are rookies with no cabinet experience. wait and see if that means a fresh way of looking at things lot of ranch hands with saddle sores down at the home-d with a dome.

ome appointments are clearly the product of a twisted sense umour: Arch-conservative cowboy Ted Morton as Minister Sustainable Resources! Good one Ed!.

elmach also eliminated the Minister of Aboriginal Affairs ndio in a province with the second biggest Aboriginal pop-on in the country. Looks like Aboriginals, women, visible rities, and the two biggest cities in the province are with-much rep in the cabinet for the next few years. Fortunately, ulnerable rural ridings, the ones that control most of the ange's seats, are sittin' pretty.

APITAL IDEA

MONTON IS A CULTURAL CAPITAL! YIPPEE! em. Okay, so the city's arts community has been abuzz with the news of our being named a Canadian "Cultural al" by the federal government. Thing is, the title doesn't mean anything. Everyone gets to be a cultural capital at some point. Look at the other centers of artistic merit celebrated this year: Comox Valley (BC), Baie-Saint-Paul (QC), and, ahem, Moose Jaw (SK).

Lest we sink into the mire of moribund self-congratulation, let's make sure we put the two million bucks the title comes with to work making our already excellent arts scene truly great.

NEVER SAY "NEVER"

ATTEMPTING TO HEAL THE WOUNDS INFLICTED BY THE residential school system, Canada is set to pay $1.9 billion in reparations. Every First Nations person who attended residential schools is eligible ro receive some of the dough, with additional monies provided for victims of mental, physical, or sexual abuse. The package awaits approval of two more judges before it goes into action.

Phil Fontaine, the grand chief of the Assembly of First Nations, told The Globe and Mail, "Never again will such a racist agenda be tolerated in Canada."

A nice thought, but despite all the pretensions Canada has about being a fair and just society, we simply are not there yet.

For a present day example, just look at the treatment of Middle Eastern people in our post-9/11 world. Based on false information provided by the RCMP, Maher Arar, a software engineer and dual Canadian-Syrian citizen, was extradited to Syria by the United States. There he was tortured into false confessions and still remains on terrorist watch lists.

GROW UP, EPS

YOU BELIEVE THAT 25 PER CENT OF PEOPLE ARE A waste of skin.

You have wanted to hold a seminar entitled, "Suicide... Getting it right the first time."

You strongly believe in involuntary sterilization.

According to an Edmonton police association newsletter recently made public, the above are all thoughts "good cops" have. It was meant as a joke, black humour for those who face life and death situations everyday.

We appreciate the fact that the police have exceptionally difficult jobs and have to deal with some trying people, but... what with the tasering of suspects in custody, and the Overtime shenanigans, and the "no rats" charm offensive... we could go on... well, to tell you the truth, we were already feeling that maybe there was already enough disdain for the public in the air.

IN BRIEF

SNIP, SNIP

LADIES—AND GENTILE MEN ESPECIALly—no matter your personal preferences when it comes to the male member, the foreskin is definitely out. According to the World Health Organization, circumcision cuts HIV/AIDS infection rates in half. The early results of two trials in Uganda and Kenya were so positive that doctors stopped the experiment early. Funded by the U.S. National Institute of Health, these results confirm earlier conclusions reached by French researchers in 2005. How circumcision in men affects the spread of HIV/AIDS to women is the subject of their next study, with results expected in 2008. The snip, snip operation doesn't completely protect against the virus though, and UN agencies were quick to add condoms are still a necessity.

ANOTHER BOOMING SUCCESS

IF YOU'VE NOTICED A JUMP IN YOUR rent recently, you're not alone. Rents in Edmonton are climbing, a direct result of low vacancy rates.

Edmonton had the sharpest drop in vacant apartments this year, decreasing by 3.3 per cent to 1.2 per cent, according to a Rental Market Survey done by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC). Just another kick in the pants, or more accurately the wallet, thanks to Alberta's fantastic, red-hot oil economy.

Bad as that may seem, at least Edmonton's doing better than Calgary. While rents are up 9.9 per cent here in Rivercity, Cowtown's renters are suffering under a 19.5 per cent increase. And while the average two-bedroom apartment in Edmonton goes for $808 per month, Calgarians pay $960 per month.

Torontonians pay an insane $1,067 and Vancouverites a princely $1,0[illegible]. At the other end of the spectrum, two-bedroom apartments in Trois-Rivières go for $488 and in Saguenay for $485.

While the average two-bedroom apartment in Edmonton goes for $808 per month, Calgarians pay $960... Torontonians pay an insane $1,067.

OOOH, SHINY

PUTTING AN END TO THE LOC[illegible] debate around that shiny panelling on the third floor of the old Bay building, University of Alberta architect Len Rodrigues has confirmed—that's the end product folks.

While much speculation has been tossed back and forth (check out www.connect2edmonton.ca) regarding the third floor exterior, that rough zinc paneling is the final product and what was originally envisioned for the historic building. While the material may darken with age, no other coverings will be added.

However, Rodrigues reports that the renovations on the Bay building are surprisingly on schedule and budget.

The road to nowhere

Transit life fraught with yobs and knobs

COMMENT
EXILE

I HATE EDMONTON TRANSIT. I REALLY hate, really hate it.

I hate the sadistic bus drivers who take off from the station when they're ten feet behind them and the next bus is 30 minutes away.

I hate the stupid ETS planners who advertise improved bus-train connections yet somehow managed to increase my commute by five minutes in each direction.

I hate the curvy, winding bus routes that turn what should be five-minute jumps into 25-minute odysseys.

I am reliant on Deadmonton transit because of my penury (look it up) and consequent lack of a motor vehicle. Actually, given that I work downtown, I would still use the bus newspaper. I turn my MP3 player up (who cares about deafness? I'm worried about irritation) and channel the brighter colours of the spectrum through my mind—not really, but I wish I had that kind of mental discipline. Sometimes, unfortunately, I forget to bring the music, or the battery dies and I've forgotten to pack a replacement. I'm ripped from my cocoon of otherworldliness and thrust into the mundane lives of my fellow passengers, and trouble follows.

I've seen a guy with his schlong out at Coliseum station, rubbing it up against his girlfriend as she talked on a public phone. No one said anything.

On the train weekdays had I a vehicle to avoid outrageous parking [illegible]

However, I am now going to be [illegible] a car every other weekend so [illegible] shop, sightsee, and date [illegible] (Inshallah—look it up) in relative [illegible]fort. I'm sure the sight of me in a [illegible] compact car will cause the [illegible]lation of this city to be seized [illegible] an ungovernable lust, throwing [illegible] the car doors, and tearing at [illegible] clothes, and I will be arrested for [illegible]ding naked.

[illegible]ry to shut out the outside world [illegible] on the bus or train. I close my [illegible] or bury my face in a book or a escape.

Another time I listened while the high school guy behind me described to his friend the incident that had brought about his suspension: "He fuckin' stole my fuckin' smokes and LIED about it. I HAD to bring that desk down on his head." He must have been dating the girl I saw on another bus, another one of [illegible] suspended for beating the crap out [illegible] she saw the two-for-one banner up at Burger King.

I've seen a guy with his schlong out at Coliseum station, rubbing it up against his girlfriend as she talked on a public phone. No one said anything as they passed, though I considered offering a compliment. People smoke, drink alcohol, have fights, vomit, etc. Crazies rant and sing, and bus drivers and transit cops ignore a lot of it, seemingly having given up the battle long ago.

I'm fed up with Edmonton Transit in general, as you can tell. Every time they have their annual conference, I try to register online with no response. They probably cross-reference the list of potential registrants with their list of people who call in to complain, so I don't hold out much hope.

But really, if they have any interest in improvement, I'm the kind of passenger, a heavy transit user on the cusp of car rental, whom they should be interested in.

Maybe next time I'll crash it.

WINTER RAGE!

In case you hadn't notice yet it's FUCKIN' WINTER outside! Guess what people: it comes every FUCKIN' year. So why do we all of a sudden forget how to drive? Yeah I know, you just got a brand new BMW SUV and I'm sure it's FUCKIN' fabulous in the snow but, honestly, do you really need to drive like a moron and speed past everyone? And I know you think you're soooo cool talking on your goddamn cell phones but, guess what, it takes TWO hands to drive—especially when the roads are icy! And, for god's sake, don't block the intersection while talking on your cell phone when I need to turn left and then look at me like it's my fault. GET OFF YOUR FUCKIN' PHONE and pay attention to the roads. No wonder my mother always told me to beware of other drivers. Go back to driving school if you don't FUCKIN' get it!

IN THEATRES DECEMBER 22ND

Old God almost dead

For one brief, shining moment, Alberta was defenceless

FOR A SECOND THERE, WE HAD NO premier at all.

And for the first time in more than a decade, King Klein was simply Ralph Klein. He had just quit live; no one else had even been mentioned yet. Had the Cylons or Americans or Eastern Canadians attacked the steps just then, as Mayor Mandel and perhaps 1,000 others in those ugly leather Wrangler jackets looked on, what mad ascendancy would have taken place? Whose eyes would we stare into for leadership as we were "liberated" and "freedomed" from our holy resources? The fleeing Paul Lorieau, perhaps? He could elevate his Zoidberg mic and let us run the show from the crowd—I like it!

Strange thing to think, but this happens as your head freezes and eras, despite months of broadsheet reminiscing and tabloid cocksucking, actually and finally do end. This was the real moment.

HIDDEN NINJA
FISH GRIWKOWSKY

Nervousness. Hidden excitement. Are these the first few ingredients needed for the long reign of Premier Anne McLellan? Yeah, I know. Dream on, fat little wayfarer. Still, we're already in the Halcyon Days, which is a lot different than "approaching and taking credit for them." It's a huge difference.

Right now, the economic classes are being violently hewn—sent to separate corners. Not everybody's excited that this place is getting fucking expensive. In fact, a good majority of younger people don't like it at all.

A few of us watched, I must say cleverly, from a thankful close-up snowdrift that let us peer over the side railings. Slowly, the turkey-assed, lanyard-necked media bandwagoned around us away from their assigned podium, realizing we Statler and Waldorfs had the best seats in the house.

The ceremony was simple, bookended by bearded Ukrainians in trenchcoats singing about God and Jesus, their OG Orthodoxy long abandoned even by Roman Catholics. These soaring, ethnic notes didn't exactly warm the frozen shadow of the Lege, but they made a statement the same way a Dukhobor curling up and dying on your lawn does. You feel the ghost n...

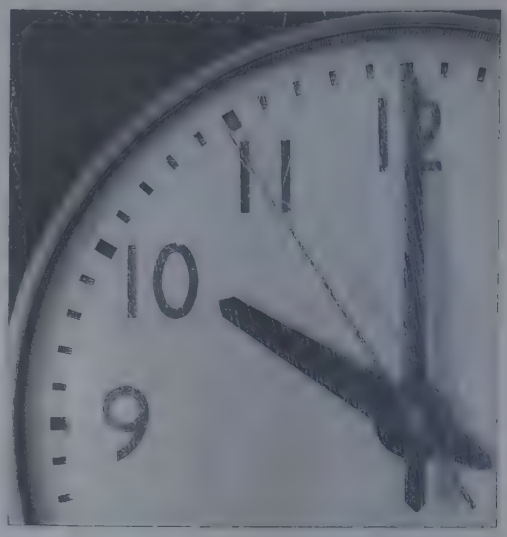
Someone's gotta do it

That one day off isn't for everyone



EMBER 25TH. THE ONE DAY IN THE that the city gets as shut down s going to get. The day that n 24/7/365 occasionally turns 24/7/364, or 24/7/364.25, or months.

But, life goes on. Out of milk for ord? Good thing someone's still to sell you milk. Got a new puter that you can't load the dri- for? (And if so, are you still Windows?) Someone's there lp you.

So let's spare a thought for the ple who have to work Christmas , while they share their thoughts the subject with us.

mind. If I wanted to and was relief available I could it off. I get days off in the mid- the week where other people w is Christmas Day different any other day?

sn't. It's a work day. We get calls, and it's no different.

es anyone call you at work to you a Merry Christmas?

do get calls like that. Quite a times it's elderly people and call in and say "oh you guys ing a great job" and want to Merry Christmas. But we've had merous occasions during the here people will call to wish Merry Christmas. It's on our gency line of course.

does the volume of calls com- to any other day of the year?

as busy Christmas Day, volume.

s the craziest Christmas emer- y call you've gotten?

me that sticks out in mind is an calling in and asking how her turkey. There was a outage earlier in the day. She in the morning sometime... we 5:30, she called in around ten as wondering how to stuff the and if she could do it on the use the power was out, at temperature to cook and how long... it was a funny call were flabbergasted. We know if she was serious but in I guess she was. So we had a laugh about that.

s the most interesting experi- you've had working on Christ-n called in because she was naturally labour, so it was to hear that and we (me work partner) were both oh my goodness, a Christ- It was nice do you do to make Christmas k as fun as it can be? What rates you through the day?

Usually on Christmas Day the squad will set something up. We'll talk about it on the previous shift before the day and we'll plan a potluck because we're there for the day so we still have to eat. So we plan a potluck and everyone will bring something in... and it's the highlight of the day besides 5:30 and going home.

What's the one thing you'd rather be doing?

Anything else. Yeah, well I'm like everybody else. I'd rather be at home spending it with my family and close friends and sitting around laughing and talking. But I'm happy to be there while I'm there... you have to go there and put in your time and do it to the best of your ability and then when it's home time you leave.

BINESH BHAKUR
EMPLOYEE AT MAC'S
CONVENIENCE STORE

Why do you work on Christmas Day?

I am on the schedule. It's a 24-hour store so I have to work. Somebody has to work.

How do you feel about working a holiday few others work?

I don't mind.

How is Christmas Day different from any other day?

It's not different than other days, but the thing is if nobody can work then I have to work. Usually it's busy in the morning but it's getting slower in the evening. After 3:00 it starts getting slow.

What do people usually buy?

Mostly they go for bread, milk, and some groceries. Cigarettes, and you know...

What's the most enjoyable thing about working on Christmas Day?

The customers are happy. If the customers are happy then I'm happy too. That's the day I see people most happy.

Apart from overtime, do your bosses do anything to make it easier to work on a day most people have off?

We get bonuses.

BRENT REID
ETS BUS AND LRT OPERATOR

Why do you work on Christmas Day?

As I get more and more seniority I have the opportunity to take more and more days off. But I mostly choose weekends so most of the weekends I work happen to be Christmas as well. Because of my choice of days off it just works out that way. I don't specifically look to work Christmas Day per say, but it's a nice bonus, as it were.

How do you feel about working a holiday few others work?

Well the city does the best they can to get as many operators off on Christmas Day as possible. We are as closed as we can be and still perform some skeleton service... As far as liking it I enjoy it quite a bit. My wife and I don't have children and the people who travel on the bus that day have a huge amount of warmth to them. They are going where they want to be... it's a wonderful, wonderful route as far as the patrons wanting to be on the bus. It's not because you have to go to work or the mall to get groceries and lug them home on the bus. The mood is much more upbeat on Christmas Day. People are in good spirits and it's nice pleasurable way to spend your day. On the buses you get a chance to interact the entire day and I do miss that somewhat (working on the LRT) especially on Christmas Day.

What's the most enjoyable thing?

The most enjoyable if I had to single it out, is that initial greeting when they come through, you've got certain people that always say good morning or good afternoon or whatever the case may be. But the greeting on Christmas Day is so much more laid back and relaxed when they come through the door. Maybe a lot has to do with my perception but the look on people's faces you can tell it's a different day. Even the people that don't celebrate it realize there are so many around who do that they experience that joy.

Who takes the bus on Christmas Day?

There are some who choose to take the bus. Our regular riders aren't all captives. One of my patrons was a U of A professor, and one year he came out on Christmas Day to just say Merry Christmas and get out of the house a bit. We'll still get the kids going from one friends to another, I still get a cross section it's just reduced

What's the most interesting experience you've had working on Christmas?

I had a young guy on the bus, he might have been pre-teen but I think he was closer to 14 and I think he was from a shelter, but he came out and wasn't dressed for it, and it just happened to be Christmas Day and he sat at the back of the bus and I cranked up the heat up for him and I could tell he was getting warm... and he stayed on and when I made a stop and checked for lost articles and stuff I went back there and asked where he was headed and made a little small talk and I got the impression he wasn't headed anywhere. I just joked with him for a bit and he stayed on for a while... He just didn't want to be with anybody and I didn't want to press it but just let him know that I was here if he wanted to talk. I probably read a lot more into it than there was. But that interaction made me see a bit of me in him and it definitely makes you wonder.

What's the worst experience you've had on Christmas?

I really haven't had a bad one, (but maybe the day I just told you about). The person who gets off your bus and has no place to go, and there isn't anything you can do about it. You can look for the silver lining and hope you did something that made their day a little brighter, but you can only hope.

Have you ever gotten tips on Christmas Day?

Not tips per se... but one guy offered me a bottle of alcohol once. But that was a no-no, I was on the job and it was cash value and I'd have to declare it. We're not allowed to accept gifts of cash value. If someone wants to give me a gift, I tell them a smile and if they really want to buy a gift give something to Santa Anonymous and say it's on behalf of the bus driver. Or stuff for the stuff-a-bus. And most people accept that. I've been offered a cash tip before, but I had to turn it down, so we put it in a donate-a-ride envelope on my behalf, that I can do. The generosity of people surprises me.

RAKESH SHARMA
CORE TECHNICAL SUPPORT
MANAGER, DELL

Why do you work on Christmas Day?

Well, I am a Hindu and do not really celebrate Christmas, so I wanted to let my colleagues celebrate with their families.

How do you feel about working a holiday few others work?

I feel someone has to, so it does not really matter, in fact I feel privileged to be amongst a few who are here to help our customers

How is Christmas Day different from any other day?

From what I understand in the spirit of the season, everyone is motivated to be good to others and that is awesome.

Does anyone call you at work to wish you a Merry Christmas?

Our calls are the same, that does not change, what changes is the volume we receive. Everyone who is working celebrates and wishes each other

What's the most annoying thing about working a day few others do?

Nothing, except that its tough to get a lot done with everyone being away, but then the flip side is that I have a lot of time to work on things that have been on the back burner for a long time

What's the most enjoyable thing?

The peace and the positive spirit.

What's the most interesting experience you've had working on Christmas?

I was really impressed to see the holiday spirit and everyone around me happy and motivated and I could actually feel the positive energy.

What do you do to make Christmas at work as fun as it can be?

Well, we make sure we are walking around, distributing gifts/food, drinks etc....the whole floor is decorated and looks very beautiful.

What's the one thing you'd rather be doing?

Spending time with my daughter.

STEPHANIE CAMERON

Seriously: happy holidays

A little prevention preserves the ho, ho, ho

THE HOUSE THAT ONCE CRADLED four kids, a dog and two parents has been sitting a three-quarters empty for the past few years as careers have lead the children away. But with the holidays coming, the house will once again be at maximum capacity. Almost everyone has a significant other in tow and this year my brother's in-laws are flying in from Australia for their first snow-laden Christmas.

About a month ago, my parents began getting things cleaned, baked, or repaired. Now, with guests arriving any minute, the pace is feverish. Little things that normally wouldn't draw tears: the pressure is on to make everything perfect.

My family may easily be imagining more than a few days in December can really deliver. It can be a waterfall of disappointment, if you demand too much of yourself and the holiday season according to Health Canada. That's why the federal department recently compiled a list of recommendations (a holiday emotional survival guide) for the festive season:

"Take a good, hard look at your expectations."

When the gap between what you envision and what you really have is big, stress awaits.

"Get real."

"Delegate, Delegate, DELEGATE!"

Talk with people you will be spending the holidays with. Identify who is responsible for what and alleviate uncertainty, which drives stress.

"Build a sense of fail-safe achievement."

Ask at the beginning of each day, "What two small things can I do that, no matter what else happens, will make it a good day for me?" Congratulate yourself when you get them done.

"Stick to a budget."

Agree to an overall amount of money with family and friends. If you have a lot of people on your gift-giving list, develop a roster of rotating names for gift giving. While you're at it, plan and budget for one enjoyable experience after the holiday as an antidote to post-holiday blahs.

"Reach out to others."

If you think that your situation is tough, compare notes with friends. You may discover that you're actually coping rather well, and that you can make a helpful suggestion or two.

"Do something nice for yourself."

Take a break. Catch a flick. Take the dog for a long walk. There should be something in the holiday for you, not just for everyone else.

GLOOM BOOMERANG

If the stress of gift-buying, house cleaning, and holiday hosting weren't enough, some people are also trying to cope with additional stresses. For some, the season will underscore existing life problems, like dealing with a divorce or separation, a recent death or clinical depression.

Last week, the Canadian Mental Health Association released the results of a study showing that social pressure, financial stress, raised holiday expectations, an increased feeling of loneliness, increased family interaction and the "commercialization of the winter holiday season" are the top triggers for holiday-related stress and anxiety.

The study also revealed that 76.6 per cent of people who have been diagnosed with anxiety or depression see a return of their symptoms during the winter holiday season. Glenn Thompson, Chief Executive Officer with the CMHA says the results were startling, "We've known for some time that December and January are extremely stressful months, but what we didn't know was how far-reaching the effects of holiday stress would be."

An Edmonton-based social work-er says there's no denying that the holidays draw considerable attention to the challenging parts of our lives.

"It appears that while January to November, people survive with depression but December causes exacerbation of all symptoms—tension, loneliness, sadness, suicidal ideation. Also people become reflective during this season, looking back over the past year. Aren't we socialized to do so with the New Year's Eve thing and everything?! And if they don't have positives to reflect on, this time of year reinforces negatives and hopelessness.

MAKING IT TO NEW YEAR'S

She makes many of the same suggestions as Health Canada but emphasizes the importance of getting out and reaching out.

"Everyone wants to feel productive, I know the clients I deal with do, even if it is only volunteering once a month for an hour—connecting to others helps those intense feelings to dissipate somewhat—although not altogether because chronically depressed people will tell you that medication only 'takes the edge off.'

"There are a number of resources in the community to connect with, provide hampers, dinners, etc. Also this might seem only a bandage—is—but if an individual is strong enough to make a connection, it could be a connection that would save their life."

If you're like us (which, fortunately, you're probably not) you wasted the better part of a weekend glued to CBC Newsworld and its coverage of the Liberal leadership convention earlier this month. How we spent two days devoted to the internal squabbles of a party we don't even like all amounted to Cameo appearances by Rick Mercer delighted, Belinda Stronach shocked and Michael Ignatieff ...

Seriously, though, the drama was swift and defied expectation, especially in the victory of dark horse candidate Stephane Dion.

Dion, like former leadership hopeful Michael Ignatieff, is a former academic who has published books and articles as academics must. The Liberal Party website, however, lists only one, Straight Talk: Speeches and Writing on Canadian Unity.

Now, that's a real pot-boiler of a title.

Published in 1999 by McGill-Queen's University Press, Straight Talk is Dion's only English-language trade publication. Dion wrote it while Unity Minister in Chretien's government; as part of his job, he was required to engage with Quebec nationalists' arguments for separation.

Straight Talk was so controversial a title in Quebec that it could not find a French publisher. McGill-Queen's agreed to do the French, and then received threats.

The Canadian public is so desperate for more information about this geeky, alabaster-skinned potential PM that Straight Talk is selling out wherever it is stocked.

The publisher told Quill and Quire that reprinting the volume is "more a question of how many than if or when."

ESCAPING THE MATRIX

Carrie-Anne Moss Enjoys The World's Most Important Job

tory Scott Lingley

Snow Cake, Directed by Marc Evans, Starring Carrie-Anne Moss, Alan Rickman, Sigourney Weaver Opens Fri, Dec 22

n the middle of talking about the actors and directors she'd like to work with some day, Carrie-Anne Moss suddenly draws blank. She knows he's a legendary direc- who recently passed away—they had even cussed working together—but his name just coming. You can almost hear her slap forehead over the phone when the name bert Altman is suggested.

"It's my mother-of-two brain," she explains ove the commotion of her three-year-old who is a little impatient to have his ther's complete and undivided attention. r youngest, another boy whose name she never divulged to the press, just passed first birthday in November and already been an uncredited co-star in not one two of his mother's films—albeit, in utero. Andrew Currie's Fido, a quirky zombie ady due out in 2007, Moss's pregnancy written into the script as it became harder guise. But for Marc Evans' Snow Cake, a gue drama set in the futuristic metropolis wa, Ontario, the cold climate conferred ks.

"Heavy clothing worked for me. No one ll tell except for me. And it's great when look back, you know, [the film] is kind of epsake of your journey," she says.

"What a pleasure to work pregnant. It was l. fun—not physically taxing at all. I felt the luckiest person in the world to be g what I love and be pregnant at the same because I wasn't sure that could coincide ther. I felt very lucky to be doing the most ortant job in the world—growing a human g—and at the same time getting to play have fun."

Of course, the option existed to just not do ne at all while she was pregnant. Moss en conspicuously picky about the mov- since the success of the Matrix which she portrayed Trinity, a PVC-clad asskicker with a soft spot for Keanu Reeves' would-be messiah Neo. Rather than taking roles that reiterate her star-making action role, the Vancouver-born actress has shown a preference for supporting roles in smaller-budget films with strong stories, such as Christopher Nolan's Memento and Lasse Hallström's Chocolat. Moss says Snow Cake and Fido met her criteria.

"I really like a good story. Both those scripts really rang true for me as two things I really wanted to do... It became about, do you do two movies that you love, or do you do one movie that you don't love that pays a lot of money? For me, it came down to two movies that I loved. And yeah, it was really about exploring all kinds of different parts for myself, and I feel lucky to be in a position to get to do it.'

Age is no object

In the case of Snow Cake, the fact that Alan Rickman—"He's one of my favourite actors," Moss says—and Sigourney Weaver were already attached to the British-Canadian co-production helped her make up her mind.

Rickman stars as Alex, an Englishman fresh out of prison who arrives in northern Ontario to reunite with a woman with whom he has had a son. Alex gives a ride to a young hitch-hiker named Vivienne (Emily Hampshire) and, just as the young woman's ebullience begins to crack his morose demeanour, they have a terrible road accident that leaves Vivienne dead and Alex twice as mired in guilt and self-reproach. By way of atonement, Alex pays a visit to Vivienne's mother, Linda (Weaver), whom he discovers is a high-functioning autistic woman. Alex begrudgingly consents to stay with Linda until after Vivienne's funeral, which allows him time to become romantically involved with Maggie (Moss), a free-spirited woman whose laissez-faire attitude toward romantic coupling has made her something of a local scandal.

"I wasn't sure I was necessarily the right person to play [the role], but I thought I would make it my own," she says. "What I did with the role that wasn't really on the page was that I made her a lot softer than she was written. I think it would have been easy to play her kind of harder, and more, you know, that sexual sort of vixen that has that strength and a hardness to her. It just didn't ring true to me. So I think I ended up playing her with a lot more warmth than maybe would be expected, and yet it just felt right, especially working with Alan—it just evolved into that for me."

> "I think it would have been easy to play her kind of harder, and more, you know, that sexual sort of vixen that has that strength and a hardness to her. It just didn't ring true to me."

On-screen chemistry can be a tricky thing, particularly when there's a 20-year age difference between the people involved, but Moss said her trust in and rapport with her co-star helped make their movie relationship believable.

"It was just effortless to fall in love with him in the world of the movie. He's a wonderful human being," Moss says. "There was no age [issue]—it wasn't about that. It was about two people showing tremendous respect and love for one another in the world of what we were doing, and I think we felt really comfortable with one another and that really came through."

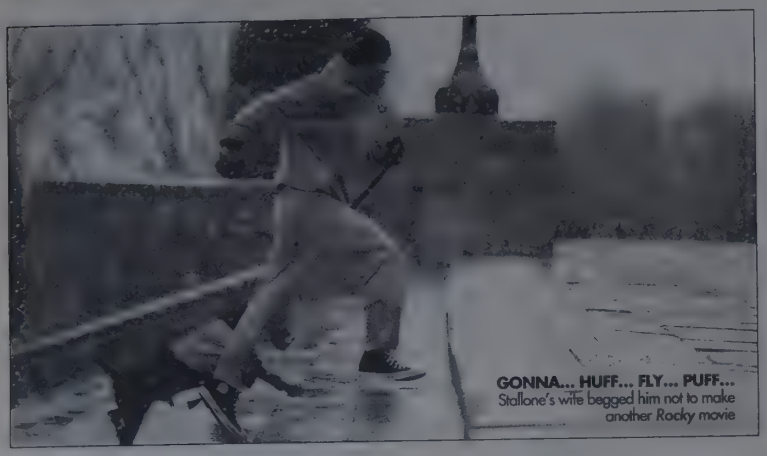
Spare the treacle, spoil the audience

The much trickier relationship in the movie is between Alex and Linda, whose household runs on her compulsive sense of order, her attraction to sparkly things and her love of bouncing on her trampoline. Screenwriter Angela Pell drew on her own experience as the mother of an autistic child, and Sigourney Weaver modeled her character on Ros Blackburn, an Englishwoman with autism from whom she borrowed some of Linda's mannerisms and affinities.

Moss says one of Snow Cake's greatest strengths is its refusal to sentimentalize Linda's peculiarities or make her disability seem somehow cuddly.

"What I really loved when I read it is we hear about autism all the time in the news and we all know people who have children that have been affected by it, but we very rarely hear what happens when they grow up, how do they live their lives when they're older?" she says.

"I liked that [Linda is] this human being that's so complicated and could say what she wanted so completely and had no censorship about how she communicated that. It was never about manners or how she said what she needed—'put your arms around me, but don't hold me too tight' and 'please stop hugging me now, don't talk to me now.' To have that kind of ability to express yourself without any kind of filter is difficult, and yet beautiful, and that's what I really took away from working on the movie."



GONNA... HUFF... FLY... PUFF... Stallone's wife begged him not to make another Rocky movie

Stallone earns TKO

New Rocky wears down your defences

ROCKY BALBOA
Directed by Sylvester Stallone. Starring Sylvester Stallone, Burt Young, Geraldine Hughes, Milo Ventimiglia, Now Playing, ★★★★☆

IN 1975, A RELATIVELY UNKNOWN Sylvester Stallone wrote a screenplay entitled Rocky, the story of a small-time boxer who gets a shot at the big time. He shopped it around to several major studios, but no one was interested. When United Artists, a small-scale production company, agreed to make the film there was one condition: a major star had to play the lead role. Instead of being overjoyed that a studio wanted to make his movie, Stallone refused to sell the screenplay unless he was cast in the title role.

Eventually, the studio gave in, Rocky went into production, and Stallone's determination paid off handsomely. The film was a major sleeper hit, connecting with audiences around the world, earning 10 Academy Awards nominations (including a Best Actor nomination for Stallone) and going on to win three of them (including Best Picture and Best Director). The film also launched Stallone's career into the stratosphere, whilst simultaneously thrusting the name "Italian Stallion" and the phrase "Yo, Adrian" into the public's consciousness.

Thirty years later, much has changed. Stallone, at one point the highest paid actor in Hollywood, finds himself a "has been," having seen his beloved character turn into a joke as each progressive sequel found Rocky more and more cartoonish and more and more unintelligible. "It's Rocky vs. Mr. T" or "It's Rocky vs. the Russian" or "It's Rocky vs. Someone—I'm not sure who because I can't understand what he's saying." When I first heard they were making a Rocky VI, I feared it might be "Rocky vs. the Terrorists." Luckily for Osama Bin Laden, this is not the case, because the 60-year-old Stallone still finds himself in excellent physical condition.

TIMES A-CHANGIN'

Rocky Balboa catches up with Philly's favourite son mourning the death of his wife, Adrian, who succumbed to cancer a few years prior. He visits her grave frequently and has opened a restaurant in her name.

Unsure of how to move on, Rocky spends most of his time at the restaurant happily recounting his glory years to starstruck customers who come in to eat and catch a glimpse of the former heavyweight champion, or with Adrian's brother Paulie (Burt Young) reminiscing about his lost love and about how their golden years aren't exactly golden.

To make matters worse, his relationship with his son (played by Milo Ventimiglia, best known from TV's hit show Heroes) is strained because Rocky Jr. feels as though he can't escape his dad's legendary shadow, and his budding romance with his new friend Marie (played convincingly by newcomer Geraldine Hughes) is complicated by her teenage son.

It appears that the "Italian Stallion" is now just Italian.

Meanwhile, the current undefeated heavyweight champ, Mason "The Line" Dixon (played by former light-heavyweight champ Antonio Tarver) is uninspired, unable to find a meaningful opponent. When sports network ESPN airs a computer simulated match-up between Rocky vs. Dixon, debate erupts over who would actually win the match and interest is generated in something the real thing.

NO ROPE-A-DOPE

This paves the way for the final act of the movie, kick-started by an inspirational workout montage (AKA the "money shot" of the franchise) that actually made the audience I saw the film with erupt with applause. This filled me with multiple glee, and I too was overcome with a strong sense of nostalgia. Cue "Eye of the Tiger."

The formulaic, predictable sometimes plodding plot of Rocky Balboa works, and there's much satisfaction watching the aged underdog get back into shape, drinking cups of raw eggs and running up the same steps he made famous in the first film.

The 16 years that have passed since Rocky V seem to have done Stallone a world of good, and we find him refocused and in touch with what made the first film and the character so great. He delivers a surprisingly moving and heart-felt performance.

While a couple of monologues are too earnest and sincere, there's an interesting parallel that runs underneath the film that connects Stallone to Rocky in a way we haven't seen before; both are long past their prime, pursing dreams that most people consider ridiculous, but it doesn't matter if they win or lose, it's about trying.

"It doesn't matter how hard you can hit, what matters is how hard you can get hit, and keep moving forward," the champ says to his son.

As writer and director, Stallone manages to orchestrate the ultimate comeback, not only for his beloved creation, but also for his ailing career. He's made a film that brings Rocky's journey full circle, making this last visit worthwhile.

Franco: Still dead?

Almodovar's latest damaged family evokes Spain's factured past

VOLVER

...er is set in 2003. That was not ...y year for Spain. The news ...s that sometimes appear in ...n are filled with coverage of ...est fires that swept through ...untry during the summer of ...

...plot itself revolves around a ...r fire that devastated the fami... film's protagonist. 2003 was ...e year that huge numbers of ...graves from the civil war were ...rcovered, all over the coun...es burned throughout Spain, ...e dead seemed to rise from ...graves. And the country went ...h some pretty serious trauma ...heir shared guilt for their ...pain, guilt that they had, ..., been hidden from the ...y for several decades.

...'s Volver about? As fires ...roughout Spain, a young ...(Lola Dueñas) becomes ...ed that her mother (Carmen ...) has risen from the grave. ...mother has some pretty heavy guilt for the pain she was involved in, pain that had been hidden from the family for several decades.

Her sister (Penelope Cruz) finds herself repeating the cycle of violence and repression, although with a slight variation. She tries to cover over the fact that her teenage daughter had killed her husband when he tried to rape her. For much of the film the husband's body is in the restaurant where she tries to make a new start; she finally buries it near a river that is much beloved by the family.

In short, the evidences of the violence that was committed by good people who were just trying to protect themselves from the abuses of authority figures was covered up in plain sight, really for anyone to see if they had bothered to look.

Gee, I wonder if that might have something to do with the excavation of mass civil war graves?

Now don't get me wrong. Volver is also very much about Penelope Cruz's voluptuous figure; one shot of her cleavage taken from a camera that seems to be in the rafters of the ceiling makes that pretty darn clear. And generally, its narrative is really about the emotional lives of women. Indeed, the more moving from-the-rafters-image comes during the funeral of the sisters' beloved auntie (Chus Lampreave), when old woman after old woman elbow each other out of the way to bestow kisses of condolence on Dueñas.

The film is filled with the kind of impossibly rich, feminine performances that Almodóvar alone seems capable of extracting from actresses. It's also characterised by a combination of visual lushness (and it sits very easily alongside the best Almodóvar films in terms of its vivid use of colour) and wind-blown sparseness (which has echoes in the small and run-down village where the film is set but also in the performance of Blanca Portillo as the sisters' gaunt cousin).

Indeed, Volver has a pleasantly working-class feel to it, giving an incredibly detailed portrait of the everyday joys and sorrows of proletarian Spanish life. In these ways, of course, the film has nothing to do with Franco.

It is, instead, a typically accomplished and sophisticated Almodóvar picture, and probably one of his best. He is clearly a master of melodrama, and is now inarguably operating at the very top of his form.

Big-name Canadian film finds the line between moving and maudlin

SNOW CAKE
Directed by Marc Evans, Starring Alan Rickman, Sigourney Weaver, Princess Theatre, Opens Dec 22, ★★★½☆

ALL THE ADVANCE BUZZ SUGGESTS that Marc Evans' Snow Cake is a film about a woman with autism. Given the way that most movies treat people with disabilities, this might be a reason to stay away from it, lest one be inflicted with another cutesy, quasi-mystical retard with a lot to teach us all about life and love.

Thankfully, Snow Cake is a film about surviving grief and loss that just happens to feature a character with autism. What's most striking about the film is how deftly it balances its heart-wringing premise with humour, to the point where it doesn't seem entirely apt to categorize it as a drama.

Alan Rickman's terminally pained expression is deployed to maximum effect in his portrayal of Alex, a reserved Brit who has just arrived in northern Ontario with some very heavy baggage indeed. As he informs the chatty Vivienne (Emily Hampshire), a young hitchhiker who has insinuated herself into the passenger seat of his rental car, he's just been released from prison for killing a man. Vivienne, who is voyaging to Wawa to visit her mother, is undaunted by Alex's admission and proceeds to pry a little laughter out of him. Their rapport, however, is cut short by a speeding semi that broadsides Alex's car and kills Vivienne instantly.

Seized with grief and survivor's guilt—the accident was not his fault, after all—Alex stops in snowbound Wawa to apologize to Vivienne's mother, Linda (Sigourney ... but not only does Linda appe... pletely unaffected by her daut... death, she seems entirely pl... pied with the assortment ... toys that Vivienne was br... her. he story is that of Motown emo Berry Gordy and of the emes—so wonkily veiled that it ally makes the film's blemishes l out. Dreamgirls, which ted on the Broadway in 1980, cus the fascinating cultural phenon and cauldron of egos that Motown to a finger-deep wade the life of upstart impresario is Taylor, Jr. (Jamie Foxx) and ansformation into a self-cen- l bigwig. (Heeyyy... isn't that ghly the same character Foxx d in Ray?)

lly Curtis parlays his Cadillac skills into record production marketing, but when a surefire stolen out from under him by -performed race records, he es to play like the big boys and ment his A & R skills with payeanwhile: although Curtis con- s the rise of his Rainbow label and parcel of the the civil rights vement, he foments friction with- ale trio The Dreams (née ettes) by demoting too chub- l too black lead singer Effie fer Hudson)—his significant by the way—in favour of svelte, more white-friendly n (played by the Diana Ross of eneration, Beyoncé Knowles). u can probably sketch in most plot points after that, which is someone does a little drawing around the points, but they don't It's not just that the story doesn't dig deep—it's got too much history to get through: must keep moving!—it's that it erases gritty elements of the source story. Florence Ballard died in poverty at 32 after being supplanted by Ross in the group Ballard had started. You won't be surprised to learn, given that Broadway prefers triumph to tragedy, that there will be no dying for Effie.

Nor, indeed, for Jennifer Hudson. The famously spurned American Idol contestant is being hyped as Oscar material. (The Dreamgirls phenomenon doesn't want for hype.) It's true that her mercurial Effie makes humiliation hurt so good, but when Hudson—confusing screechy hyperventilation with emotive power—belts out the patented Dreamgirls showstopper "And I Am Telling You I Am Not Going"—you may find yourself wondering what it would take to make her change her mind.

Title-wise, "And I Am Telling You I Am Not Going" seems to reflect as much potent imagination as "I'm Just Going to Grab Some Milk: Back in a Sec." Broadway may once have been the ground zero of American songwriting, but it's becoming a factory of same-sounding melodies delivered with uncontrolled firepower—chutzblah, if you will. The ballads are particularly off-putting, to say nothing of their staging: you begin to feel like a guest at a wedding where you don't know anyone—everyone's heartfelt speeches sound particularly precious.

It's not all downside: the movie looks nice and flashy, smartly cataloguing changes in American style in fashion, art, and marketing from the '60s through to the mid-'70s. If only the music had been similarly faithful.

Maybe you don't care about that. Maybe you love it Broadway-style. Well then you might enjoy the glitzy but rote Dreamgirls, but even you will find it difficult not to cringe when the film climaxes with a moment of recognition so supa-extra maladroit, you can hardly understand how the same filmmakers were responsible for the electrifying opening.

Some nearly ok movie

Charlotte's Web means well, but...

CHARLOTTE'S WEB
Directed by Gary Winick, Starring Dakota Fanning, Julia Roberts, Dominic Scott Kay, Now playing, ★★★☆☆

IT'S A DICEY PROPOSITION, FILMING AN adaptation of our beloved childhood classic. It must be spectacular, but also able to touch our hearts as E.B. White's words did. The book, after all, is rife with solemn lessons about altruism, friendship, and death. To see those things glossed over and made into chintzy Hollywood frippery would be a travesty. It has to be a success, on the scale of Peter Jackson's Lord of the Rings.

The creators of this live-action version have obviously taken that responsibility seriously, hiring an A-list cast and painstakingly recreating the sets in the image of wholesome, Midwestern America as depicted in the simple line drawings in the book. Director Gary Winick is interesting, having directed charming, witty films such as the Tadpole and 13 Going On 30. All the pieces are there to preserve the original spirit of the novel, all the reverence to the text is palpable. Nevertheless, it fails.

This in spite of a cast, like I said, that reads like a Hollywood power player roster. Sweet Dakota Fanning, who continues to be poised and delightful, is Fern Arable, the little girl who saves the runty piglet Wilbur (portrayed by several dozen of the most deliciously cute young porkers) from the axe. Julia Roberts is the spider.

The rest of the farm animals are likewise a who's-who: Stever Buscemi as an animated Templeton the rat (perfect!), Oprah Winfrey and Cedric the Entertainer as the geese, John Cleese as a sheep. Robert Redford claims a bit part (a bit part!) as a horse, and Sam Shepard is [illegible] tor.

The heart of the book is [illegible] small-town family that us[illegible] "didn't question the order [illegible] things," overcomes its ord[illegible] for one summer when Fern [illegible] rescues an animal that n[illegible] siders worth saving. Maybe it's the [illegible] Charlotte—the other animat[illegible] acter—keeps blinking. Spiders d[illegible] have eyelids, silly! JONESIN' CROSSWORD

nnui can be dull

e Children captures the boredom of home life

E CHILDREN
ed by Todd Field, Starring Kate Winslet, Wilson and Jennifer Connelly, Opens c 22

E LATEST HOT TOPIC AMONG FEMINIST ters—although we have won the choose whether or not we stay home ur children, life as a stay-at-home par- n be boring. The miracle of mother- and more specifically, spending your alone with a pre-schooler while d in a suburban castle can be lonely edious, and damn it sister, you n't be vilified for saying so. Or, at so say legions of newspaper columnists lk-show guests, as does the premise of r Todd Field's latest film.

Field's last film In the Bedroom, Lit- ldren's plot is driven more by emotion by actual events. In fact, the script on a novel by Tom Perrotta, who co- the script with Field) features barely gnom. Over more than two hours, virtu- nothing happens, save for a few juicy sex scenes

The film follows two central characters—a bookish stay-at-home mom named Sarah (played by Kate Winslet, who Field has turned into a "normal-looking" housewife by denying her hair conditioner or eyebrow tweezers) and Brad (Patrick Wilson), a dreamy stay-at-home dad who is depressed over his failure to become a lawyer. Sarah is married to the wealthy, but stiff Richard (Gregg Edelman), whom she catches with his nose buried in a pair of used panties he bought off the Internet. Brad is househus- band to the beautiful but overly critical Kathy (Jennifer Connelly). Brad and Sarah start hanging out with the kids at the local pool and before long, their relationship leads them to the bedroom

Little Children is full of beautiful imagery, and with the help of an odd male narrator, Field captures a mood that shifts between fairytale and suburban ennui. While the con- cept of a story rooted in loneliness and fear of monotony is thought provoking, Field never quite gets the film off the ground

While a delicately handled subplot about a neighbourhood pedophile adds some tex- ture, Brad and Sarah's affair is not interes- ting enough to carry such a long movie. Since they feel little passion—like all the characters in the story, they seem drawn together out of convenience and desperation rather than actual love or even lust—they aren't that compelling to watch

That sense of detachment and boredom is probably what Fields is aiming for, but a successful atmosphere does not necessarily make for a successful film. It is possible to make a movie about the mundane without the film itself becoming dull, but Field didn't quite manage to pull it off

ELIZABETH CHORNEY-BOOTH

ursuit of Oscar

ith climing Academy ladder in Happyness

UIT OF HAPPYNESS
ed by Gabriele Muccino, Starring Will Jaden Christopher Syre Smith, Thandie n, Now Playing, ★★½☆

SMITH HAS MADE A PROMISING ion into feature films, playing a gay e in Six Degrees of Separation, or mmad Ali in Michael Mann's excellent hich earned Smith his first Academy d nomination for Best Actor). He's also d as a believable action star, playing dinary man in extraordinary situations emy of the State, Independence Robot, etc.

n the get-go, it's obvious that The Pur- Happyness is a calculated opportuni- tement Smith's status as one of Ameri- st dramatic leading men. It's the rags- es tale of Chris Gardner, a loving who through a string of bad luck and ies of missteps, hits rock bottom, mes homeless, and yet somehow finds determination and to train as a stockbro- while raising his young son on the streets n Francisco.

Reagan's America is in an economic cri- sis, but apparently the American dream is still alive and well: all you need is to do is "work for it." In pursuit of that dream, Gard- ner risks his family's future by pouring all their savings into equipment that he intends to sell to hospitals all over the Bay area Unfortunately for him, the equipment is con- sidered a luxury and no one's buying

As his debt deepens, Gardner's wife (the normally excellent Thandie Newton, strange- ly performing over the top here) abandons her loving husband and son. But determined to create a better life, Gardner holds firm to his dignity, faith, and his independence. Though under-qualified, he's hired as an intern stockbroker: six months of training, at no pay.

Eventually, Gardner and his son (played by Smith's son Jaden Christopher Syre Smith, who is surprisingly not a bad little actor) are evicted and bounce back and forth between shelters and subway bath- rooms. Just when things look like they might improve, bad things make his struggle to achieve his dreams all the more difficult, and unfortunately, more unbelievable

Apparently the film is "inspired by a true story," which means that most of it has been exaggerated or manipulated to make Gard- ner's journey more dramatic. Pursuit of Happyness has so many potential Academy Award clip moments that I became hyper- aware of how hard everyone was working to create a film worthy of winning the little gold statue

Smith's heartfelt performance makes the film watchable and seeing him act with his real life son adds an interesting dimension to his performance, as you truly do see the love that exists between father and son. Unfortu- nately, it all seems too calculated, making his inevitable rise to the top unsatisfying.

ight Night

est low-effort Stiller flick is all FX

T AT THE MUSEUM
ed by Shawn Levy, Starring Ben Stiller, Williams, Owen Wilson, Carla Gugino, Coogan, Dick Van Dyke, and Mickey ey, Opens Fri, Dec 22, ★★½☆

EL AS IT MAY BE TO POINT OUT THE s of age afflicting an old-school Holly- ooper, in the case of Mickey Rooney s performance as one-third of a -like team of geriatric security guards er do wells in Night at the , it's unfortunately a necessity. His what appears to be a talking testis n the fires of hell has the potential e some serious psychic scars.

ough perhaps there's a lesson to be here: just as Gollum became his self in his singular pursuit of the Rooney's alarming visage can buted to a physical toll paid for ing fame from a 50-year string of ed ham-bone mugging.

hat's not the worst of it: Robin is in this thing, too—in full painfully made

Luckily, he's not around much either. Ben Stiller, somewhat balancing the above freak- ishness with a bland run through his lines, acts as our tour guide through yet another film ultimately about nothing more than the marvels of computer-generated imagery. Leading up to the parade of digitally ren- dered elephants, statues (including an Easter Island-like deal that talks like the Cookie Monster—yet another horror), dinosaurs, etc, the not-so funny man plays Larry Daley, a divorced father who's a bit of a dreamer/schemer of the failed variety. He takes a job as a security guard at the Muse- um of Natural History in a bid to introduce a bit of stability to his wallet and his kid's life

But whoa—every night an ancient curse turns all of the displays into. . computer graphics run amok.

Now Daley has to contend with warring factions of Huns (life-sized), Mayans, cow- boys, and Romans (from the more manage- able mini-dioramas; Owen Wilson and Steve Coogan make semi-comedic turns as the leaders of the latter two), a playful T-Rex skeleton, and a Mrs. Doubtfire-ish Teddy Roosevelt (Williams, of course).

Truth be told, the effects are pretty good, and as tempting as it would be to rip further into this rather empty film and talk about the increasingly diminishing returns of children's entertainment, in all honesty when I was kid all you had to do to keep me happy was plop me down in front of something (any- thing) animated or with monkeys (Tony Danza's Goin' Ape being a particular fave) and I was happy. This movie has both—plus the simian in question pisses on Stiller.

As such, they'll probably love this. And you? Well, you'll just have to hunker down and bear it. 'Tis the price you must pay for propagating the species. Merry Christmas.

capsule film reviews

Babel The supplemental title to Alejandro Gonzalez Iñárritu's latest film should be When Bad Things Happen to Everyone. The director of Amores Perros and 21 Grams offers another multinarrative, the pieces of which interlock in oblique but apparently meaningful ways to reveal how we're all connected, especially when we hurt, once again pick away at the false sense of security that our social structures and our undeserved sense of privilege afford us, to show how quickly all that can be wiped away by cruel fate. The parallel tragedies invoked to explore this terrain, however, seem as false and poorly integrated as the wads of putty applied to make Brad Pitt look a normal middle-aged male. Babel seems bloated rather than informed by its welter of weighty ruminations. ★★★☆☆ (SL)

Blood Diamond Fisherman Solomon Vandy (Djimon Hounsou) is pressed into service picking diamonds out of a muddy river where he's mistaken for a rebel fighter and arrested, but not before hiding a sizable diamond. Former Rhodesian mercenary Danny Archer (Leonardo DiCaprio) smuggles diamonds from Sierra Leone and neighbouring Liberia to a diamond cartel in London. Solomon's diamond is his ticket out of Africa. The usual plot inconveniences are taped together in the usual careless way, but the film's primary failing is that it keeps the action "over there." If director Edward Zwick really wanted to rub people's faces in it, he would have shown where the diamonds actually go—say to the fingers of women in white dresses in cities like Edmonton. ★★★☆☆ (KW)

Bobby In Bobby, writer and director Emilio Estevez speculates on the assassination of Bobby Kennedy in an ensemble piece, where the impact of his death is related through the fates of nearly two dozen fictional characters present at the legendary Ambassador hotel the night he was killed. It doesn't actually reveal a lot about Kennedy, his life, ideas, or even why someone would want to kill him. While Estevez demonstrates an impressive ability to coax good performances from actors one normally wouldn't even suspect of talent, Bobby doesn't quite clear the park. There's attention to detail, lending a credible atmosphere, numerous entertaining moments, but, frankly, not enough Bobby. ★★★☆☆ (LL)

Borat: Cultural Learning of America for Make Benefit Glorious Nation of Kazakhstan Sascha Baron Cohen's peculiar genius: going out into the world posing as gormless characters, brushing up against the powerful and the ordinary and using his cheerful ignorance to expose the latent bigotry, hypocrisy, and idiocy of total strangers. Cohen is a walking special effect, so completely ensconced in mock-duelessness that no amount of hostility will discourage him from perpetrating ever-greater abominations of etiquette, cultural sensitivity, and decency. Just when you think that he can't milk any more novelty out of his racist, sexist, homophobic, crude and patently dumb alter-ego, Cohen ups the ante, compounding outrage with outrage until there's a solid chance you might wet yourself. Far and away the funniest movie of the year. ★★★★☆ (SL)

Casino Royale Casino Royale follows James (Daniel Craig) to several exotic locations as he tracks down the main villain of the film, a banker to international terrorists, Le Chiffre (Mads Mikkelsen). Director Martin Campbell has delivered a fantastic action film that relies more on suspense and intrigue than the over-the-top gadgetry of past Bond films. Casino Royale reinvents Bond. He's a lean, mean, cold-hearted, womanizing, professional killing machine. Here we are presented with a real, complex, and brooding man, who doesn't always win. This is a Bond that is rough around the edges and he's all the better for it. ★★★★☆ (NC)

The Departed Matt Damon is a cop working for Martin Sheen and Alec Baldwin. Leonardo DiCaprio reports to Irish mob boss Frank Costello (Jack Nicholson), whose thoughts are scarcely troubled by human feeling. Unfortunately, this Martin Scorcese remake of a Hong Kong action classic gives the actors little to play with. So even though Damon is really working for Nicholson and DiCaprio is really a mole for the cops, and even though Nicholson gives a great performance, this trip to the outskirts of the darkside doesn't impress. ★★★☆☆ (MH)

Fast Food Nation Co-written by author Eric Schlosser and director Richard Linklater (Slacker, Waking Life), Fast Food Nation takes hard-hitting reportage and creates a plausible and convincing narrative sure to upend even the most jaded of cinemagoers. The cast, a who's who of independent and mainstream cinema, features Greg Kinnear as the well-meaning but impotent fast food executive and Bruce Willis as his menacingly power-hungry colleague. The frontline associates at "Mickey's" are teenagers just as likely to rob the joint as they are to show up on time for their shifts. The gruesome final scenes of the killing floor in a meat plant are deeply disturbing. This is not an escapist Hollywood romp, but a scathing examination of what goes into our food. (RM)

Flicka Flicka is a curious hybrid, one that follows the blueprint of the girl and horse and a dad who just doesn't understand genre. Instead of drowning the proceedings in cloying clichés, they have grounded the timeworn plot with a bracing dose of reality, while keeping the family-friendly tone intact. Alison (Matchstick Men) Lohman's Katy McLaughlin is a realistic, free-spirited, and unsentimental 16-year-old who whiles away the hours at her stuffy Laramie, Wyoming private school with daydreams of running her family's ranch. Flicka rises to the occasion, as wild as advertised, a fresh and intelligent family adventure. ★★★★☆ (MH)

The Fountain In Darren Aronofsky's The Fountain, Hugh Jackman stars with Rachel Weisz in parallel stories spanning three centuries. Though not emotionally charged and metaphysically compelling, that's not to say it doesn't look astonishing. For a movie spanning three disparate epochs, it has remarkable visual coherency. The players, too, are remarkable. However, it focuses so claustrophobically on the principle pair that it leaves the reality they live in only lightly shaded in. A little humour wouldn't have hurt either. In the end, The Fountain becomes so fixated on its grand themes that it fails to convince on a human scale. ★★★☆☆ (SL)

Manufactured Landscapes A lovely piece of work by director Jennifer Baichwal following photographer Edward Burtynsky, whose landscapes fuse the pastoral with elements of our disposable culture. Baichwal seems to feel a little trapped by her subject, but she is to be applauded for getting this fascinating photographer's work out to us. Burtynsky paints pictures that are the antithesis of the prescriptive sentimentality we are used to seeing. At the heart of the film lies the reality that China is a nation rapidly becoming an urban society, making the film worth seeing just to catch a glimpse of the likely heir to the American Empire. ★★★★☆ (TK)

Marie Antoinette Sofia Coppola's biopic is frustrating, because it's difficult to see past the admittedly luxurious and glorious surfaces. We're supposed to get that Marie Antoinette—uneducated and only a teenager when she ascended the throne of France—was a woman of excess amidst the already extravagant excesses of court life, and we are meant to think about this story in the context of modern times, but she makes us work so hard to glean any point from the movie, it always feels like we're projecting our desire for a point onto it, excusing the film rather than allowing it to speak for itself. ★★★☆☆ (MS)

National Lampoons Van Wilder 2: The Rise of Taj In this film, we find Taj Mahal Badalandabad (Karl Penn), fresh from his wacky adventures at an American college in the first movie, arriving to attend school in England. He, of course, becomes enemies with some stiff-upper-lip meanies and joins a fraternity of misfits whom he leads, of course, in a triumphant ascent from social nothingness to campus heroes. However, not even the actors here seem to, well, act. They just lifelessly utter stale jokes about boobies and other matters somewhat related to sex. ☆☆☆☆☆ (ZV)

The Nativity Story The Nativity Story has set biblical cinema on its ear. Jesus' mother (Keisha Castle-Hughes) must deal with a Nazareth populace skeptical about divine conception when a woman's supposed to wait a year even after marriage or face stoning, the angel Gabriel and prophecy notwithstanding. But she's got the support of cousin Elizabeth (Shohreh Aghdashloo), future mother of John the Baptist. And new husband Joseph (Oscar Isaac) is a tower of quiet strength as he and Mary make the hundred-mile trek to Bethlehem. With the family audience in mind, the reverent Nativity is refreshingly free of guilt-driven Gibsonian violence. Only the portrayal of the wise men as comic relief jars. ★★★☆☆ (MH)

The Queen This is undeniably a classic two-hander about the Elizabethan monarch and her adviser, yet there's something not quite on about the idea of a film on the present monarch. In the 21st Century we ought to have got over our strange fascination with hereditary power and privilege. Frears' film seems altogether too soft and reverential, though it masquerades as a pithy critique of all things royal. This is a film that, for all its scenes of Elizabeth doing "normal" things like drinking tea, answering telephones, weeping, and swearing, has no interest in determining whether the members of the monarchy are really "just like us." ★★★☆☆ (CN)

The U.S. vs. John Lennon Despite the title, this documentary is not primarily about the long legal battle Lennon fought to stay in the U.S. but is a piece of agit-prop that desperately wants to say, "activism en masse brought down one criminally-inclined, wire-tapping, civil-liberties-revoking president mired in an unpopular and unwinnable war, and it can done again." One can't help but feel stirred and/or angered by the footage of speeches and protests. A different film, yes, but one that doesn't assume we're too dumb to explore the issues, opting instead, as is done here, to inspire change through the celebrity hagiography of another era. ★★★☆☆ (ZV)

Hip-Hop For Hunger to make us eat our "rap vegetables"

HIP-HOP FOR HUNGER
Feat. Politic Live, Touch, Oozeela, K-Riz, Details, Proveli Paragon, Emcee E, and Freshly Squeezed, Fri, Dec 22, Starlite Room (10030-102 Street), 9 pm, Info: 428-7827 or , $10 ($8 with non-penishable food donation)

DIAMOND-FLASHING PIMPS AND JIGGY hoes. Velvet-lined rides and ritzy shades. According to Ian Keteku (a.k.a. Emcee E), mainstream rap is simply an all-you-can-eat buffet filled with chocolate-smothered brownies and high-calorie cream puffs nowadays.

Now what would mom have to say about that?

Well, for one thing, she'd agree with Keteku when he says that too much dessert isn't good for you. And although the multi-tasking University of Alberta Political Science student and spokesperson for Edmonton's fifth annual Hip-Hop For Hunger strives to fill the stomachs of those in need this holiday season, he also hopes to school Edmonton's hip-hop fans in the art of healthy musical eating.

"[Rap's] like any good meal," Keteku says as he nibbles on a robust meal consisting of vegetables, rice, shrimp, and beef. "You've got to have your meat and potatoes, you've got to have your vegetables and you can have some dessert, but it seems like all we see right now in the mainstream media is the dessert. What Hip-Hop For Hunger does every year is it brings out a bit more of the meat and potatoes, a bit more of the vegetables and, of course, some of the dessert.

"I find myself more of a vegetable MC," Keteku jokes. "The stuff that I talk about, the lyrics that I perform are very socially conscious and very political. Sometimes I talk about racism, sexism, and what have you, and these are issues that definitely need to be covered in society."

BOOM AND BUST

This yearly battle of the beats expects to raise—and possibly surpass—3,000 lbs of food for the Edmonton Food Bank, but social causes aside, Hip-Hop For Hunger also hopes that local artists and performers—such as Politic Live, Touch, Oozeela, K-Riz, Freshly Squeezed, and Emcee E himself—will draw some attention to Edmonton's music scene.

Because Edmonton and Alberta are in the midst of an economic boom, more and more people are becoming homeless and ending up on the streets. And for Keteku—who's also an Anti-Racism Educator for the Northern Alberta Alliance on Race Relations and the Program Coordinator for the Edmonton Immigrant Services Association—events like the Hip-Hop For Hunger are a great way to for artists to put their talents to good use, all the while deconstructing the negative preconceived notions the mainstream portrays of night club shootings and young black culture.

"A lot of organizations and musicians don't find that connection, that they can use their talent and art for socially conscious causes," Keteku says. "An artist like Oozeela from the Dominican and the Caribbean comes with very socially conscious lyrics, stuff that you won't hear on mainstream radio. Touch is an MC that really brings it back to the underground, to the roots of lyricism. It's not that hoes and bitches stuff you hear on the radio. That's not what hip-hop is about.

"But also, [Hip-Hop For Hunger] is for the people," Keteku continues. "We hope to accomplish a great party so that people can get the awareness, check out the local acts and have a good time while their at it."

LABOUR OF LOVE

The idea of Hip-Hop For Hunger came from the cousin and friend of Politic Live's Arlo Maverick (AKA Marlon Wilson). After hosting the first one in Vernon, BC, the idea was brought out here to be taken over by Maverick, who says he took hold of the reigns simply because his organizational control-freak side kicked in.

"It's one of those things where you get satisfaction out of it in the end," Maverick says. "I don't mean for that to send corny or anything, but you go through the weeks of actually preparing it, promoting, going out and handing out flyers, putting up posters, and things like that. And when you get to the end, it's cool to see the labour of your work."

Maverick's looking to spread the event to Vancouver, Saskatchewan, and Red Deer next year, as well as turn it into three-day event featuring forums and showcases. That way, mouths and minds across Canada will find one sort of nourishment or another.

"No matter where you go, hip-hop will be focusing on the negative rather than the positive end," Maverick says. "To me, I think this event shows that what the community as a whole can do. I hope the event will continue on for years to come.

"Who knows how long it will go for? Because once you start, it's hard to finish."

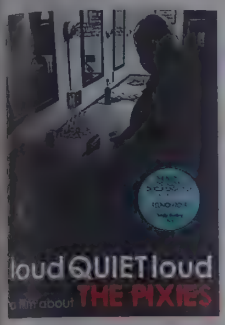
Last minute CD/DVD gift ideas to save your ass with fam and friends

SO MUCH TO DO AND SO LITTLE TIME! Oh crap! What are we to get for little cousin Willy or for aunt Hilda? Surely, everyone appreciates getting a little music at Christmas time? Of course they do! But where to begin? Well, gathered a few last minute ideas for everyone on your list—because we really want to help you have a safe and sound Christmas...

COMPILED BY FRANÇOIS MARCHAND, EAMON MCGRATH, TOM MURRAY, AND PROSPER PRODANIUK



For Your "Indie-Til-I-Die" Thirty-Something Friend:

■ The Pixies, loud QUIET loud DVD

First, there were the Pixies, and then there were... the Pixies. Your friend was the first in line for the reunion tour ticket sale, the first at the front singing along and crying, and the first at the merch table for the live bootleg. If life begins and ends with the Pixies—and if you're not afraid to see a really overweight Frank Black do phone interviews in his boxer shorts—you'll definitely want to get your friend the DVD documenting the coming-back-together of one of the most important indie rock acts of all time. A surefire hit. (FM)

For Your Twelve-Year-Old Brother Who Thinks Simple Plan is Punk:

■ American Hardcore: The History of American Punk Rock 1980 – 1986 CD

Taking you on a road trip to a time when music was really, really underground, where your weekends consisted of sniffin' glue and bloody noses, and where your friends had names like Darby Crash and John Doe, American Hardcore reconnects you with what makes youth so great and what makes music so powerful. All the big names are here—Bad Brains, D.O.A., even Battalion of Saints—and upon listening, there's nowhere you'd rather be than in a dirty club in Washington, D.C., or Los Angeles circa 1982. Every true music lover I know grew up on this stuff, and when you hear the passion, intensity, and commitment from all the bands on the comp, you'll finally understand why hardcore was real and hard core mattered. (EM)

For a Niece Who Makes Her Mother Worry About Her Late Nights:

■ Ministry of Sound, The Annual 2007 CD or DVD

Bring the rave home for her with Ministry Of Sound's 12th yearly review. The Annual 2007 collects the year's biggest pop club anthems for a booming disc of trance (Tiesto, Kleinenberg) and house (Armand Van Helden, Kaskade). (PP)

For the First Cousin Who's Stuck in the '80s:

■ George Michael, Twenty Five CD or DVD

He's mostly noted for substance abuse and solicitation issues these days, but Michael is still a hit-making juggernaut. The 44 songs spread across this triple-CD compilation include massive hits ("Careless Whisper," "Wake Me Up Before You Go-Go"), unreleased numbers ("Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?"), and other rarities. (TM)

For the Gangsta Groovin' Youth Who Needs the Thug Taken Out Of Him/Her:

■ Zion I and The Grouch, Heroes In The City Of Dope CD

Evoking the Dream Warriors and the early days of De La Soul, Zion I and The Grouch's Heroes In The City Of Dope is probably the most positive hip hop album around. Slip them in your stereo and they'll start smiling, rushing out to buy old funk records while the nihilism melt away. (PP)

For the Family Dylanologist:

■ Dylan Speaks DVD

The hour-long, televised press conference from 1965 where Dylan entertains and bewilders the media and a few local celebrities (Allen Ginsberg, promoter Bill Graham) with quips, non-sequiturs, even a few straight answers. Clips have been seen in Don't Look Back and No Direction Home, but this is the whole deal, dry spots and high points and all. It's Dylan on the cusp of his electric career, with an excellent sense of chain smoking and declaring WC Fields, Smokey Robinson, and Charlie Rich to be his favourite poets. (TM)

For the Oh-So-Hip Son Who Needs His Music Pitchfork-Approved (8.2!):

■ Luomo, Paper Tigers CD

Poppy enough to become a guilty pleasure, experimental enough to save face with friends, Luomo's Paper Tigers is the soundtrack to all of those techno nights (no, not raves) that he's been going to. (PP)

For Your Classic Rock-Inclined, Country-Lovin' Godfather:

■ My Morning Jacket, Okonokos CD, DVD, or vinyl box set

Alt-country rockers My Morning Jacket surprise everyone by making a double-live record in the most classical sense—superb

For the Mod Cousin:
■ The Who, Live at the Isle of Wight Festival 1970 DVD
A high watermark for the band, playing most of Tommy along with a number of covers associated with them ("Young Man's Blues," "Summertime Blues," "Twist and Shout") to an early morning (2 am) festival crowd. The sound is cleaned up (with a 5.1 remix), and the performances are stunning—five minutes in and you can see why rock drummers should be bowing in the direction of Keith Moon's grave at least once a day. For Your Disco Maniac Nephew And His Tripped-Out Honda Civic:
■ Headman, Relish Compilation CD
He won't have to keep their moves to his bedroom anymore because disco's cool again. Headman is one of the best at the nu-disco game and there's a brand new compilation from his Relish label with mixed and unmixed discs. (PP)

For the Wannabe Hepcat, or Anyone Who Needs to Chill Out:
■ Miles Davis, Cool & Collected CD
A compilation hip enough for the hardcore fan who just wants a nice, easy-flowing collection of Davis' most accessible stuff, and laid-back enough for the uninitiated to really get into Miles' cool. (FM)

For Your Hipster Older Sister Who's Convinced Nothing Good Came Out of Seattle in the '90s:
■ Nirvana, Live! Tonight! Sold Out!! DVD Reissue
As we continue to tread knee-deep in the cesspool of "nu-grunge" that is modern rock radio, we can't help but feel that we owe a lot of it to a three-piece from Aberdeen, Washington. Thanks for Nickelback. Kind of. But when you re-examine the live footage from Nirvana's pre-Nevermind tour, interviews during their rise to fame, and legendary "Hollywood Rock" performance in Rio de Janeiro—all on this DVD—the thing really comes to mind: Duuuude, Nirvana kicked ass. No suicidal, self-loathing, pimply-faced, Pixies-loving reluctant rock stars will ever matter more, and Live! Tonight! Sold Out!! will always be that perfect document telling why. (EM)

For Your Funky Granola-Hippie Uncle Joe:
■ Jamiroquai, High Times: Singles 1992-2006 CD or DVD
Whether you pick the video or audio version of High Times is inconsequential—either way funky acid jazz-infused rhythms of Jay Kay and Co. to your favourite patchouli-splashed relative and watch him start his own awkward spasm dance moves on your living room floor. Good times, for sure. (FM)

For Your Aging Cougar Aunt Who Has A Thing For Operatic Young Men:
■ Il Divo, Live at the Greek Theatre DVD
And I thought popera was dead. Il Divo looks like a younger, sexier, and, um, slimmer Three Tenors, only there's four of them. The "magic" acoustics of the illustrious Greek Theatre in L.A. propel all of their youthful vocal chords and that child-sized 20-string instrument that seems to appear in all new age and easy listening concert movies. It's all here! Panpipes! White suits! An audience full of yuppies who paid 400 dollars U.S. for a spot in the front row! Who can resist? Oh, right. Um, me. But soccer moms, on the other hand, have a new reason to stay up after hubby goes to bed. (EM)

Peanuts for the holidays

Merry Christmas, Charlie Brown!

VINCE GUARALDI TRIO
Charlie Brown Christmas
Producer: Vince Guaraldi; Released: November 9, 1965; Fantasy # F-8431

BONUS ALBUM
IF ONE WERE LOOKING FOR AN ALBUM of Christmas music that doesn't lose its appeal, appears to be timeless, and manages to get both the faithful and the agnostic into the holiday spirit, one couldn't go wrong with the pianist Vincent Anthony Guaraldi's soundtrack for the Peanuts Christmas special, A Charlie Brown Christmas.

Guaraldi accompanied Nina Simone, played with Stan Getz, Woody Herman, Frank Rosolino, and Conte Candoli, and collaborated with Cal Tjader and Mongo Santamaria. But this accomplished pianist and composer, who tragically passed away in his prime 30 years ago, will no doubt always be best remembered for his impeccable soundtrack to a comic strip.

As early as 1963, Guaraldi was approached to provide music for an animated television adaptation of Charles M. Schulz's Peanuts, and went on to compose music for 16 Peanuts television specials, as well as the animated feature film A Boy Named Charlie Brown.

But it's Guaraldi's invocation of the holiday spirit for the very first

LECH LINKIEL

Peanuts Christmas special, aired in 1965, that stands out

OH, GOOD GRIEF!

Before Peanuts, Vince Guaraldi was already a successful West Coast jazz pianist with his unique arrangements of popular jazz standards and his signature tune, "Cast Your Fate to the Wind." His music had a distinctive sound that few others have been able to approximate. Though largely ignored by critics, Guaraldi developed one of the most distinctive, original, and joyous sounds in jazz piano—perhaps only Thelonious Monk is as instantly recognizable.

However, Guaraldi did not really find his "voice" on the instrument until 1962's Jazz Impressions of Black Orpheus. His prior recordings, Vince Guaraldi Trio, Flower Is a Lovesome Thing, and Jazz Impressions (which is really just a sampler of the two former works) are simply unexceptional West Coast jazz. The lightness of mood on these three early albums is further accentuated by the absence of a drummer.

Guaraldi is often been labeled "easy-listening," a mostly unfair characterization reflecting the accessibility of his work rather than its artistic merit. It precisely this light and vivid touch that not only made the Peanuts characters come to life—providing a distinct musical persona for each of the main characters—but also makes an album of Christmas music that avoids the heaviness of other such collections, without disappearing entirely into the background of a busy season; beautiful, yet exquisitely restrained.

IT'S YOUR DOG, CHARLIE BROWN!

Guaraldi recorded his compositions for the Peanuts Christmas special with two different trios: the first 11 cuts with Fred Marshall on bass and Jerry Granelli on drums, the rest with Monty Budwig on bass and

- Originally also available as a book-and-record set featuring stills, dialogue, and music from the television special.
- Hearing "Cast Your Fate to the Wind" in a cab prompted Lee Mendelson, the producer of the Peanuts TV specials, to approach Guaraldi.
- Guaraldi's Grammy-awarded "Cast Your Fate to the Wind" was inspired by the Brazilian film Orfeu Negro.

It's music that instantly triggers Christmas memories, as well as a good jazz recording that can be listened to year round.

Colin Bailey on drums, while Guaraldi himself handled the piano. A finer combo providing a soundtrack for the holiday, which excites children as much as adults, is still hard to find

They start off "O Tannenbaum" with a moving piano solo which then blends into a jazzy rendition of this classic piece. "What Child Is This" boasts a sensitive musical arrangement emphasizing piano and drums to produce a somewhat melancholy sounding piece of music. The rendition of "My Little Drum" is magnificently based on "The Little Drummer Boy." "Christmas Is Coming" and "The Christmas Song" are aptly named for musically conveying the anticipation and joy of Christmas, while "Linus and Lucy" is Vince Guaraldi jazz at its finest

Which is perhaps why many people don't even realize they're listening to a jazz album when they encounter this marvelous collection of Christmas music—but they do. Hence, one of the strengths of A Charlie Brown Christmas is a crossover appeal equal to classics of the genre such as Time Out or Kind of Blue

It's music that instantly triggers childhood Christmas memories, as well as a good jazz recording that can be listened to year-round by those who wish to recall Christmases past—when life seemed much more magical and simple—as well as jazz enthusiasts who seek to experience a little Christmas spirit

Cleaning the Eye DVD
(Ipecac)

ISIS' LATEST FULL-LENGTH, IN THE ABSENCE OF Truth, expands on the crashing ebb and flow intensity of their last few albums. Predictably, Truth also finds them building on the more melodic explorations that took shape throughout 2004's Panopticon—longer dub/ambient passages, guttural throat screaming tempered by attempts at vocal melodies—with varied success.

When Isis do drop the hammer, they're as powerful as ever—maybe moreso juxtaposed against the gentler leanings of the songs. The sung vocals are less effective, mixed texturally in the music (good), but occasionally calling to mind Alice in Chains at their worst (bad).

Still, it's a very natural progression for the band, and a worthwhile listen, especially in the more explorative second half. In the Fishtank finds Isis sharing a Dutch (read: smoky) studio with Aereogramme. The results shy away from the expected quiet/loud dynamics to showcase a more measured and subtle side to the band. The only dud is "Delial," a looping metal-tinged number that sounds out of place and never takes off. Clearing the Eye offers an accurate account of the band's live show spanning their career, and if nothing else, shows how developed the band were from their inception. Also included is Isis' only music video, but it's a stinker.

NICK PERREAULT
The Good Intentions
(Shameless)

EITHER SHAMELESS RECORDS ARE IN LEAGUE with the devil, or they've just been incredibly fortunate. I say this because Shameless Records plays host to a roster of youthful and talented local musicians who all seem to have been plucked right out of their musical cribs and pushed into the studio, instruments in hand, ready to wow listeners with unexpected folk velour and pop delicacies.

To clarify things, Shameless Records aren't baby snatchers. They're just darn good at honing in on talent. Amy Seeley, the Wheat Pool, and now Nick Perreault with his album, The Good Intentions, put the independent label up on the leader board. "Fire By Night" features Perreault spilling on his piano like a rainforest waterfall on a boulder, and "Alberta Blues" takes a nostalgic stroll down happy-go-lucky lane. Even his cover of Belinda Carlisle's "I Get Weak" (although the vocals feel a bit rough and ragged at times) challenges the most gifted pianists.

Every track manages to hand a lollipop to its listeners (except maybe for "Injured Ignored," which tastes like sucralose), and on that note, we truly have to wonder whether genetic modification might be the "shameless" weapon of choice.

Good Morning Story

WHILE THE JUSTIFIED, UNANIMOUS PRAISE OF Can as an important band in rock's history continues to flow, the avalanche of solo reissues from the group's members is perhaps not so justified.

Like Can's late '80s comeback attempt Rite Time, 1989's Radio Wave Surfer is full of quirky (or annoying) dubby art-rock that soon grates with short tape experiments only fraying the nerves further. For rabid Czukay fans, the unreleased track "Mono Tone" is actually a nice, understated piece of ambience. Good Morning Story (1995) will find fans' ears easier if only because two tracks meditate on the riff of one of Can's most copied tunes, "Vitamin C." The rest of the album features electronic dub that would have found favor with fans of the Orb or Czukay's pals Air Liquide at the time.

There are interesting moments and experiments on both albums but they've aged far from gracefully, as it becomes clearer that Can as a whole was a lot better than its individual parts. Czukay's made the best solo albums but neither of these is as simply brilliant as 1980's Movies.

NEIL YOUNG & CRAZY HORSE
Live at the Fillmore East. March 6 & 7, 1970

LIVE AT THE FILLMORE EAST IS THE FIRST IN A slew of upcoming releases Young's been sitting on for 20-plus years. Only now—looking back on everything he's done—can you even being to really appreciate these kinds of relics: this is less of an album than it is a history lesson. Two nights at the Fillmore East—where Young played with Miles Davis—that have gone down in history as two of the defining Young & Crazy Horse gigs are documented here, exactly as they were, with some digital remastering of course.

The important factor in this equation is Crazy Horse, who wear their "world's best worst band" badge with as much honour as they're capable of. Danny Whitten—essentially "second in command" to captain Neil, and whose death inspired the legendary Tonight's the Night album—is featured here, making Live at the Fillmore East the only official live Neil Young recording where Whitten plays a part.

But back-story aside, the album soars—not unlike the swirling, proto-shoegaze guitar on the 16-minute version of "Cowgirl in the Sand" and the 12-minute marathon that is "Down By the River"—and captures the band in their most perfect, ragged glory.

WRITING THIS BEARING IN MIND fact that it will be published on ecember 21st: the winter solstice—e day with the fewest hours of unlight and, for a lot of Edmontoni-s, probably the longest and worst of the year.

The way I figure it, we have a cou-of choices. We can either hunker own in our wood-paneled base-ent rec-rooms watching Don Cher-Rock 'em Sock 'em hockey DVDs, we can get out and try to embrace e winter. Y'know, "pip pip," "stiff upper-lip," and all that jazz. Well, ere were no upper-lips stiffer than ose of the Brits who founded this ountry so I pounded on my winter ers and headed for the Hotel Mac's Confederation Lounge.

I love the Mac.

It doesn't matter how cold it is utside, you walk into the Mac ow, on a deep-dark-December ght, and you can't help but feel arm. I can't really explain it, but in lot of respects, it reminds me of the iendly Giant. Do you remember ow Friendly used to invite you in at e beginning of the show and then ll a chair next to the fire for you ile his warm voice said, "Look Look way up..."?

Slipping into a chair at the Mac is ot of like that. You sink in and are through the large French win-ows on the south side of the room the frozen North Saskatchewan ver, or maybe you let your eyes turally drift up the wall to the ormous painting of the founding thers of the Confederation. Either y, the end result is the same—a mile forms on your lips.

The menu in the Confederation unge is relatively consistent with hat you might expect to find in a unge (steak sandwich, burger, ndwiches, tapas, etc.), with some e upgrades that set it apart from e usual pub-grub menus.

For example, the burger comes th some more interesting toppers, u have your choice of cuts for the ak (including tenderloin), and u can get a grilled Portobello shroom and Brie sandwich. As mpting as everything looked how-r, you simply can't beat a hot l of soup on a cold winter's ght, and I was pleased to note that menu offered the mother of all ps: French onion ($11).

ench onion soup in bistros

around France is so ubiquitous that it's commonly referred to simply as "gratinee." In Canada, however, Lipton ruined onion soup for most by making it synonymous with a salty package that's added to sour cream so you can dip chips in it.

But a proper French-onion soup with caramelized onions, mellow garlic, rich beef broth, baguette crou-tons, and Gruyere or Emmental cheese is a thing of beauty

The soup at the Mac came in a tra-ditional French terrine which had been gratineed to melt the cheese (a nice Swiss) and brown it slightly.

When I managed to poke through the cheese and crouton layer on top, I was pleased to find a very mellow beef broth that had a nice thyme flavour to it. Additionally, it seemed to me that the soup had been fin-ished with a hint of brandy, which is quite traditional but certainly wasn't expected. I know I certainly wouldn't have left a bottle of brandy at the disposal of a large majority of the cooks that I worked with. At any rate, the soup was fantastic and although I can't be 100% certain, I strongly suspect that the brown beef stock the soup was built around was made from scratch—and that makes all the difference in the world. The broth was full-flavoured and mellow with a velvety smoothness to it which made it incredibly pleasing

Now, I like to bitch and moan about the weather as much as the next guy. But when push comes to shove, if not having winter meant missing out on a long cold night huddled over a hot bowl of soup and a dark ale at the Mac, I'd choose winter every time. The snowbirds (cowards!) obviously don't know what they're missing.

FREE STUFF

CALL TO WIN

It is with rockin' good cheer and charitable tidings this Holiday Season, that SEE Magazine revamps its regular Free Stuff contest. Instead of the weekly call-in trivia madness, SEE will be accepting donations for the Food Bank as part of our weekly movie pass giveaway. The first 10 people to visit the SEE office on THURSDAY, Dec 21 at 1 pm – and not one minute before!—with a non-perishable food donation for the Food Bank will receive a double guest pass to see Volver at the Garneau Theatre, or Little Children or Snow Cake at the Princess Theatre.

SEE will be also accepting Food Bank donations throughout the holiday season, up until the New Year, should any feel so inclined to give without receiving prizes.

Happy Whatever-Holiday-Suits-You from the gang at SEE Mag! Please do consider others less fortunate, and have a helluva good festive season.

CRUISIN' THE COSMOS

with THE KID — DECEMBER 21-26

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19)
With the Sun steppin' into your sign on Friday, we mark light's return and the start of longer days. Now, good ol' Sol ain't the only one due for a change, either. At the beginnin' of the weekend do less of what you wanna do, and start followin' the path the cosmos has set out for you!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18)
Know why you can do anything you desire? 'Cause you're so adaptable your name is synonymous with flow, as in "go with the." Even if you lose everything, you'll find astounding ways to live on less than pennies a day. Ain't no big thing to give this a shot when you realize you're all you've got – and that's a lot!

PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20)
Bein' a water sign, it's easy for you to resonate at a higher level if you're surrounded by those who are great. That's why you need to stop hangin' with turkeys and find some friends who can fly. Once you've been shown how to get off the ground, you can soar high on your own instead of flockin' around!

ARIES (March 21 – April 19)
This time, for sure, no happiness lies in a half-assed, half-hearted 'n' half-baked compromise. The longer this waffling lingers, the more success'll slip through your fingers. You've got no time for a delicate balancin' act. Don't delay while there's prey – you need to go on the attack!

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20)
Just 'cause you're good at practically everything you do, it don't mean folks gotta listen to you. This week, if you happen to see someone makin' mistakes, don't try to rush in and take over before somethin' breaks. While learnin' to walk, babies'll fall so you'd better let 'em – or they won't learn nothin' at all!

GEMINI (May 21 – June 20)
You've got no trouble usin' your slick silver tongue, but sayin' too much this week means you're gonna get stung. If you talk too much in an environment that's new, some of those words'll come back to haunt you. This week, keep your mouth shut and your eyes open 'cause the situation needs some serious scopin'!

CANCER (June 21 – July 22)
If you keep runnin' 'round like a decapitated chicken, Karma's gonna come and give you a lickin'. Not the sweet, tender, lollipop kind but the type that leaves you with a sore, bruised behind. This week, you can avoid your bum gettin' paddled by ensurin' your distractions have all skee-daddled!

LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22)
You lions sure love to roar but that ain't always enough to even the score. Now before barin' your fangs and wielding your claws, you better hold back and take a pause. That stuff might work on the wildebeests but when you're lookin' down the barrel of a big game hunter's gun, the smartest thing you can do is turn tail and run!

VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22)
You're in the black, got the wind at your back and with this turn o' the tides, now you're on the attack. Such a joyous occasion calls for celebration, but don't forget about the challenges that you're still facin'. This weekend, don't go and overdo it or when Monday comes, you're gonna rue it!

LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22)
Sometimes it'd be nice to be one of the world's less complicated creatures instead of the one that tends to over think. Heck, even a caterpillar would probably shrink from cocoonin' if you told it that it'd have to die in order to transform into a butterfly. This week, play it dumb and accept the changes as they come!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21)
You're about to receive a (not so) new mission from Cosmic Control. Now, it's gonna put you thigh-high in the thick of things, includin' all the work that followin' your destiny brings. That's why now's the time to take a nice li'l break – so you can think about the decisions you'll soon have to make!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21)
There's no reason to fret 'bout the upcomin' battle – yet. There won't be one either, if you take a breather this week and figure out exactly which arrow in your archer's arsenal makes you unbeatable. Then, when the time comes to deliver, you'll be able to quickly pull it out of the quiver!

Hold on to your soup cans and bubble wrap

MY MESSY BEDROOM
JOSEY VOGELS

YEAH, OKAY, SO MARTHA STEWART KNOWS how to make Abraham Lincoln's log cabin out of pretzels, crackers and peanut butter, but can she make a labia stretcher out of a few potato chip bag clips? From knitting to decoupage, everyone's getting crafty these days, so this year, I'm offering some cheap, last-minute creative holiday gift ideas that would make Martha blush.

For the single guy on your list, how about an Artificial Pussy?

Remove the lid and bottom of an empty soup can (or similarly sized can), and insert a white tube sock, folding the open part back over the rim of the can. Repeat using two or three socks—slide your fingers in to test snugness. Shove a plastic bag inside as a liner, and fold the open end over the top of the can as well. Secure with elastics. Pour in some warmed baby oil or lube and he's in business. When he's, um, done, he just chucks plastic bag, and replaces it with a clean one for next time.

For extra fun, he can use a pillow to elevate it to the proper pussy level or wrap a heating pad around your fake pussy to further simulate the real thing.

Cost: less than $5, or zilch if you've already got this shit lying around the house.

For her, try a Bubblewrap Dildo.

Cut bubble wrap (you can buy it at most stationery stores) into an 8 by 10-inch rectangle. Roll lengthwise with the bubbles on the outside. Slip a condom over the entire roll, secure it with tape, and voila, you now have a resilient disposable dildo. Tell her to practice her Kegels by trying to pop the bubbles.

Cost: If you're smart, you've saved some bubble wrap and have condoms already. Otherwise, you'll have to shell out a couple of bucks for supplies.

Here's a great idea for a cheap and funky Strap-on Harness. Get a pair of your tightest and sexiest 501s, and just pop a dildo (one with a flared end) between the buttons. Use a scruffy pair and on Christmas morning she can play Santa's fix-it guy who's just dropped by to check your pipes. If you want more freedom and movement, turn the 501s into cutoffs. Just make sure they're still tight enough to hold the dildo in place.

Cost: You'll need to shell out for a dildo with a flared base—there are several models available at your local sex shop—or you can adapt the end of the bubble wrap dildo with duct tape for mere pennies.

As for the potato chip bag clip labia stretcher, it's a little too complicated to explain here. If you like that kind of thing, get yourself a copy of the book I took these ideas from—Kinky Crafts: 99 Do-It-Yourself S/M Toys for the Kinky Handyperson (Greenery Press). It has great crafty ideas for everything from canes and whips to bondage boards.

Here's a super simple and cheap idea for a sex toy for him: Kids' air wings. Lube 'em up and off he goes.

Cost: Free if you know any kids who have outgrown theirs. Otherwise, try the dollar store.

If you want more freedom and movement, turn the 501s into cutoffs. Just make sure they're still tight enough to hold the dildo.

Make an Erogenous Zone Game. Find a sexy shot of your sweetheart or use an image of a hot body and stick your partner's head on it. Glue the image to a square piece of cardboard. Make a cardboard arrow and stick it into the center with one of those copper butterfly thingies that make it so you can spin the arrow. Buy sticky dots and dice from the dollar store. Tell your partner to stick the dots on the image wherever they'd like you to get busy. Spin the arrow and throw the dice to determine how many minutes you must spend on the selected spot.

Cost: Under $5 for cardboard, butterfly thingie, sticky dots, and dice.

For him or her, how about some Homemade Smut? Buy some nice Japanese paper, or hell, just cut up brown paper grocery bags into "pages" and glue sparkles to them. Write a hot story. If the creative juices are flowing, copy one you like, print it up in a nice swirly font, and glue it to the pages.

Tie the pages together with nice ribbon and toss a hot Polaroid of yourself (or, stay ing creative here, a picture of your partner's fave hottie with your head superimposed) on the cover.

Combine this with some homemade massage oil, make your sweetie a sexy mix and you've got a gift that keeps on giving.

Cost: Under $5 for paper, ribbon, and sparkles.

As Martha would say, it's a good thing.

No light petting, please

Swapping soft for full can be tricky

SAVAGE LOVE
DAN SAVAGE

MY WIFE AND I HAVE BEEN MARRIED FOUR and a half years, and we both are bi. We've been propositioned by—and played with—a number of sexy friends heteroflexible enough not to want/need full swap. So our play with others has been limited to oral and light petting.

We've now been approached by a very sexy couple, a straight guy and bi female, who want to do a full hetero swap. The male is not interested in any bi play. He is also borderline overly intense about his attraction to my wife. His girlfriend is very hot, and playing with her could be fun. The thing is, unlike cuckolds, I have a hang-up about another guy doing the full hetero swap with my wife. Light petting and oral is fine, but I feel that saving something "just for us" gives us an anchor in this sea of swingers.

Am I too square and insecure? Should I try and open myself to the idea of another guy screwing my wife? If we ever do full swap, how can we avoid the pitfalls of insecurity and jealousy? Will you please advise?

Swap Curious

Sure, SC, but the first bit of advice I wanna give you is rhetorical. Only pre–Vatican II Catholics and modern Mormon virgins use the phrase "light petting." People are going to have a hard time taking you seriously as swingers—hell, they're going to have a hard time taking you seriously as nonvirgins—if you insist on saying "light petting" instead of "mutual masturbation" or "manual stimulation."

As for "full hetero swap," well, that's pretty dunky, too, but it is a phrase that actual swingers use so I'm going to let it slide. In the Swinging Sea, "soft swap" means you only do oral and manual with others; "full swap" means you do full-blown vaginal intercourse. So you're soft swappers contemplating full swapping, SC, not light petters.

Okay, on to your question...

Not all swingers seek to avoid insecurity and jealousy. Gently or aggressively manipulating those feelings is, for many swingers, an intrinsic part of the thrill. But all swingers want to avoid the pitfalls of insecurity and jealousy. And how do they do it? By having frank, honest discussions and setting clear, mutually acceptable boundaries. So long as you know what you're comfortable with, you and the wife should be able to safely navigate the potentially treacherous emotional dynamics that are an unavoidable aspect of swinging.

Up to now your boundaries have worked just well: Manual stim and oral—soft swap—is okay; some other guy's dick pounding away at your wife's pussy—full swap—is not okay.

Should you now abandon boundaries that have served you so well up to this point? Well, you wouldn't be writing me, and you wouldn't be signing off as "Swap Curious," if you weren't, you know, curious. (Insight like that is why I get paid the big bucks.) It sounds to me like, as much as you might want to give full swap a try, you're not sure you can wholly trust this guy.

You describe him as "borderline overly intense" about his desire to fuck the living shit out of your wife. But at the same time, you seem attracted to his energy and, of course, to his wife.

So what do you do?

Test them. Suggest to this other couple that, at first, you would like to play under your current rules: soft swap only, but no bi play, since he's not into that. If this other guy really wants your wife that badly, he should be thrilled to get a crack at her even if he doesn't get to fuck her. If after agreeing to a night of oral and manual this other guy verbally suggests upgrading to full swap mid-scene, well, he gets an F. If he physically attempts to upgrade to the full hetero—if he physically attempts to initiate vaginal intercourse—he gets an F-.

But if this other couple demonstrates that they can respect your boundaries before you agree to shift them, well, then they might be good candidates for satisfying your curiosity about full swap.

I'm not in the best shape. After a couple of minutes of the old "pelvic thrust," I get winded. I know I need to improve my health in general, the whole "diet and exercise" routine. But are there specific exercises that can improve your sexual performance?

One Boy Eagerly Seeking Exercise

Sorry, OBESE, but there's no single exercise or workout gizmo that'll whip you into shape from navel to taint. You don't have to be a gym rat to have a satisfying sex life, of course, but all fucking—even if you're lucky enough to be strapped down to a bed, completely immobilized, and all you have to do is lie there and maintain a reasonably convincing erection—requires some minimal degree of physical fitness. Are your arteries lined with nacho cheese sauce? Are your lungs full of tobacco smoke? Well, guess what? You're not going to get that hard if your heart can't pump blood into your dick, and that blood is gonna be useless if your lungs can't get any damn oxygen into it.

If you've reached the stage where five minutes of pelvic thrusting winds you, get your fat ass off the couch and to a doctor's office first, and a gym second.

As a hetero male, I just wanted to say that your response to Freaked Out Girl was right on. (She dumped her boyfriend when he told her about his foot fetish.) I've dated this type before: young, inexperienced, more conventional than they want to admit, and totally unaware of how men behave as real human beings. All the words FOG uses—"sweet," "tender," "considerate," "normal"—are the kinds of words you'd use to describe every generic, one-dimensional love interest in every clichéd chick flick ever made. If pornography supposedly gives men unrealistic expectations and encourages us to treat women like objects, mainstream film and television does exactly the same for women.

I've been mistaken for that kind of fantasy archetype more times than I care to recall (although I can't for the life of me figure out why), and I'm sure this is exactly how FOG thought of her unfortunate ex. He probably didn't tell her about his kink sooner because, deep down, he sensed that she would react exactly the way she did. As far as I'm concerned, Dan, you can't point this out often enough: The conventional idea of what constitutes a "normal" man is absolutely 100 per cent nonexistent. Please keep spreading the word.

Real Love Is Weird

You're right, RLIW, popular culture does encourage women to have unrealistic expectations. If real straight men filled their girlfriend's apartments with a million twinkling votive candles as often as fictional ones do, three large American cities would burn to the ground every weekend. And rolling around in a canopy bed sprinkled with rose petals? Uh, sorry, but your boyfriend/husband is unlikely to find that fantasy terribly compelling—not unless your sister or your mother or your or his best friend is rolling around in that bed with you.

Men are freaks. And you know what? So are lots of women.

For lots more letters about my response to FOG—some in support, some slapping me around—go to www.thestranger.com/savage/fog.

A new Savage Love podcast is available for download every Tuesday at www.thestranger.com/savage.
